TRENDS & INFLUENCES, VOL. IX

Always on the forefront of luxury, design and intelligence, Ferguson presents you with some of our best offerings for 2023. Highly researched, beautifully produced, this book is a culmination of months of creative, collaborative work.

And now Trends & Influences is here; to inspire and to help you achieve your design goals, be they slight remodels or completely new projects. This year is about having an intentional, specific, authentic experience in mind for a space. For some, that might mean a closer connection with nature and everyday choices that improve the planet. Others may want to come home to a sanctuary or to feel like royalty. And still others have changing needs in their households, with their home's structure needing to change with it. We are here for your journey, whatever it may be, and we are honored to be part of it. Explore these pages to find your authentic intent and create a place that's entirely your own.

MOODY JAPANDI

Japandi, which is a meshing of the Scandinavian and Japanese styles, has been around for a few years. The earliest iterations brought us modern and contemporary lighting along with plumbing fixtures, clean lines with hidden storage, and the use of materials like marble, bamboo, brass and slate. This year, we'll see this minimalist style retain its functionality while incorporating darker tones than we've seen it previously feature. A harmonious contrast will be created with matte black, gold, darker shades of wood and bold strikes of jewel tones.

ROYAL ASPIRATIONS

This will be the year to aspire to greatness. Fit for a king or queen, the Royalcore design style embraces all that is glamorous, ornate and traditional about castle life. Born of Regency style with a bit of Victorian for good measure, this trend allows even commoners to embrace their inner royal. Crystal chandeliers, clawfoot tubs, ornate vanities, candelabras and sconce lighting are just a few of the ways to create a space reminiscent of Versailles.

MODERNIZED MID-CENTURY

Mid-Century Modern (MCM) has solidified its place among timeless design styles. Its sleek lines, juxtaposition of sizes and interesting shapes make it a versatile favorite. As such, each new generation puts its own spin on it. This year brings softer lines and bolder hues than traditional MCM. In contrast, clunky appliances will be replaced by streamlined, integrated appliances. Sputnik lighting, an MCM essential, is back with a more linear look. Contemporary and geometry-inspired fixtures complete the twist on this classic style.

BIOPHILIC INTENTION

In recent years, many homeowners have discovered that creating a space with an emphasis on natural rhythm, airflow and lighting invokes an overall sense of well-being. Biophilic interiors emphasize designs that create calming environments reminiscent of nature. This trend takes into account circadian rhythms and visual stimuli by encouraging the use of natural lighting and dimmable fixtures. It addresses subtle changes in air and surface temperature, and humidity and airflow, with fans, air purifiers and clean designs. Water is experienced in different ways including water therapy and soaking tubs. Plants, windows and other greenery add a visual connection with nature. Symbolic representations such as the Fibonacci sequence or the “golden spiral” within the aesthetic of the design mimic perfection found in nature.

MULTI-SENSORY DESIGN

This trend has grown this year as people begin to search for spaces that activate all of the five basic senses. Interior design becomes more meaningful to the homeowner when it is engaging. Texture will be engaging this year through the use of tactile objects like fabrics, wood, and stone, which can be found in the feel of hardware and fixtures. Brightness and warmth are experienced from the look of lighting. Water is felt, seen and heard through plumbing fixtures. Mixing tactile materials along with layering is key to making textural elements work.

GOTHIC GLAM

Gothic spaces have long been misunderstood. Black, Halloween-esque, gargoyles and severe furniture often comes to mind. On the contrary, Gothic is luxurious, edgy, big and bold...and often full of color! This year, we will see a return of large, statement fixtures like wrought-iron chandeliers, candelabras and bronze plumbing fixtures. Large, tall windows that allow plenty of light are making a resurgence. Yes, black accents and woodwork will be seen as well, as will other jewel tones and bold wallcoverings.

OLD WORLD ESTATE

In the same vein as Royalcore and Gothic, the Old World trend is grand and heavily influenced by the Old European manor. We will see this style in flooring, sinks and hardware with earthy materials like tile or limestone. Consider Grecian marble countertops, travertine fixtures and Parisian-inspired chandeliers. Other important elements include oversized furniture pieces and deep texture on walls, fabrics and flooring. This style calls on a number of other European influences, such as French Country, Tuscan, Spanish and Mediterranean.

ECO-MINDFULNESS

This year will see a rise in consumer environmental awareness; of products that promote conservation, room designs that are eco-friendly and materials that are sustainable. With this in mind, homeowners and designers will increasingly pursue earth-conscious plumbing fixtures, recycled materials whenever possible and smart appliances that use less energy. Products made from sustainable materials, such as bamboo and cork flooring, will see a rise in popularity in the renovation market. Moreover, consumers will opt for non-toxic and chemical-free materials in the design and material usage in every stage of a project.

EBB & FLOW: WETROOM BATHROOMS

This will be the year to create spaces homeowners have always dreamt about, and the bathroom will be the perfect place to start. The beauty of the wet room bathroom is its boundless options, literally. A wetroom is a completely open, waterproof bath space that includes all the elements of a luxe bathroom. Extremely popular in Europe for some time, wetrooms have begun to rise in notoriety in the US and we expect that this year they will burst onto the home renovation scene. Most include the elements of every luxury bathroom: an open-concept; a frameless, zero-entry shower; floor-to-wall shower tile; freestanding tub; floating vanity; an ADA accessible design, including hardware and lighting.

TECHNICAL SUPPORT

There are those who will always be resistant to change, especially when it comes to their homes, and even more specifically when it comes to technology in the home. But the fact is, homeowners are increasingly discovering that smart devices support a more modern lifestyle and make it easier to get daily chores done. Many smart devices work in conjunction with products that are good for the environment and help conserve energy and money. Smart home hubs connect to heating and cooling systems to make it easier to turn them on and off with voice control. Connected appliances and switches for bulbs and fixtures can be controlled easily from apps on smartphones. This year, and increasingly for the next few years, homeowners will begin to see the benefits of technical, smart devices in the home.
