ULTRAFUNCTIONAL

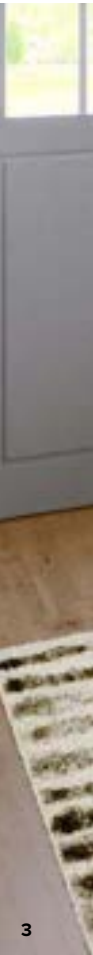

This is living, elevated. If versatility is the name of the game, implementing multifunctional products like these will give you the square footage you need to win. Meaning, your kitchen becomes more than a room to cook, your mudroom isn't just a catch-all for dirty clothes and your den becomes a work/study space.

Gone are the days of single-purpose rooms. This is meeting your family where they are—multi-functional rooms are a versatile trend that helps maximize the potential of every space in your home.

This trend is all about seeing potential and getting creative. Your kitchen can be a place to prepare, create, and entertain. Your mudroom becomes an organization destination and a laundry loft. Your den is now a home bar and a workspace. Your home office? Is a luxe guest room as well.

Ultrafunctional is all about utility, or making the most of your home and exploring every avenue of a fixture's function—to save space, to do more, or to simply streamline your everyday routines.

These days, we are surrounded by things that remove us from the very space we inhabit. Technology, helpful as it may be, can be distracting. We believe it's time to return to our roots and recognize the grounding impact a genuine connection with nature can have on our day-to-day lives.

Although it may appear to take little effort, Organic Modern style is thoughtful and deliberate. Creating a space that flows, where nature abounds, and your soul can breathe, takes careful planning and intentional expression.

Looking to implement this trend? Set down some of the natural splendor seen in the world around you and create a more open home by incorporating organic textures, fluid lines, and deeper, warmer colors when selecting fixtures and finishes.

GRAND NOSTALGIA

The Grandmillennial trend is a recapturing of multiple styles. An appreciation for a lost, perhaps misunderstood aesthetic. Above all, it's a nostalgia for tradition and a simpler time, and an effort to keep that alive.

Maybe it's the comfort you recall of sitting, legs swinging inches above the floor, from your Grandma's couch. Candy jar full of butterscotches on the end table, needlepoint pillow accenting the plastic-draped armchair next to that. Perhaps there's a coffee table with a neat stack of magazines, an ashtray, and a coaster collecting the condensation from your fizzing glass of cola. All is right with your world, everything feels beautiful and special. Now that you're grown, you want to recreate that feeling in your home. This is the kind of feeling Grandmillennial aims to recreate.

Within this style, you'll find hints of many others. Mid-century modern furnishings, traditional cabinetry, Victorian lighting, vintage fixtures, romantic and even a little bit of bohemian decor all blend to influence the new traditionalists who have embraced this eclectic style. It's about nostalgia and interjecting memories and personality-rich charm into your space.

HAIKU HARMONY

Like the haiku, this trend finds beauty in its perfect balance. The minimalist nature of Japandi is an elegant fusion of the modern elements of Scandinavian style and the ancient elegance of Japanese decor. Minimalism is at the core of both of these, emphasizing the importance of function in a space. It has a chic simplicity in its clean lines and craftsmanship.

- 3 MAXIM Horgen Pendant
- 4 HINKLEY Nula Chandelier
- 5 SHAW'S The Gallery by Shaw's® Sinks
- 6 GROHE Essence Collection

There is something to be said about the delicate nature of the haiku poem's rhythmic structure. The same could be said about the balanced, minimalist style of Japandi. This trend blends elements of the wabi-sabi philosophy of embracing imperfection as well as aspects of hygge, a Scandinavian quality that aims to create an atmosphere of warmth and comfort. This elegant fusion provides a natural, non-distracting appeal to homeowners and interior designers alike.

While Nordic design is known for light, natural wood shades, and neutral hues with pops of pastel accents, Japanese style is characterized by richer tones, stained woods, and splashes of black and red. Japandi style creates color harmony by combining the two.

Though they come from different sides of the globe, they share similar principles. Both Japanese and Scandinavian design aesthetics are exercises in minimalism. A Japandi home is not purely about aesthetics, it's also a way of life. Its simple design puts an emphasis on functional spaces that offer comfort along with respect for the beauty of imperfection.
